Former prime minister Najib Abdul Razak is under mounting pressure to step down from his role as finance minister, especially after his daughter allegedly attempted to have a vote rigging scandal hushed up. Malaysia is bracing for the potential of Najib, 64, resigning as it is also set to banish a second daughter, Noor Azizah, 53, to house arrest in the wake of corruption charges. But the prime minister's image is at rock bottom, with about 70 per cent of Malaysians losing confidence in his administration, according to an independent survey last month. According to The Globe and Mail, the country's new attorney general ruled that any charges against Najib over the corruption scandal that saw billions of dollars siphoned from 1Malaysia Development Berhad (1MDB) will be dropped if he steps down as finance minister. 1MDB is currently facing lawsuits filed in multiple countries, including the US, Switzerland and the UK, over its murky finances. The scandal has become a political hot potato in Malaysia, with Najib's rivals accusing him of turning a blind eye to the misappropriation of funds at the state-owned investment firm. Najib was the company's founding chairman. Najib's position of power is made even more precarious by his eldest son, Riza Aziz, 49, who has been embroiled in the scandal as well, the BBC reported. Riza, who is believed to have made frequent trips abroad for various reasons, has reportedly been issued with a travel ban to return to Malaysia. However, the ban is not yet in place and Riza is free to travel and meet with foreign entities. Najib, who has been in office since 2008, is seen as being under pressure from the US to step down from his post. The US has frozen the assets of 1MDB 82157476af
